

World Issue

The world issue that stands out to me is the topic of abortion. As far as I can remember I have always been against abortion. I have never had to decide if I should get one or not, so many people don't think I have a say in the matter. As a woman who hopefully one day will be pregnant I think I do. I am a peer counselor at Alpha Pregnancy Resource Center and through that process I have learned about fetus development. I learned that at 21 days the baby has a heartbeat yet after that day abortions are still available. After 5 months it is possible for a baby to live outside the womb yet abortions are still available. I don't understand how people believe that the "matter" inside a woman's belly isn't a living baby. I know people I love have had abortions and I am not going to judge anyone who has had one. I just would hope women would learn about the development of their baby before ending its precious life.
