

What would you do if you woke up as someone else?

6:45 a.m. I hear a faint alarm ring. I forgot to turn off my alarm since today is Saturday morning. I can't go back to sleep, so I decide to get up. I slowly walk to the bathroom. For some reason I feel lower to the ground than usual. My hands look way lighter than usual too. I step in to the bathroom and let out a quick scream. I am looking in the mirror, but instead of seeing my face I see my little sisters face. I start to freak out. How did this happen...where is my body...Is Bria in my body...How do I explain this to my parents..am I going crazy? I run in to my little sister's room. No one is there. Where is Bria? I walk in to the kitchen.

“Good morning, Bria.”

“Where is Bria, you see her. Where?” I asked my mom. She walks over and feels my head.

“Are you feeling ok Bria?” My mom asked me.

“Where am I? I mean, where is Mariah?” I asked.

“She's at nana's house, she left last night, remember?” Then she goes over to the cabinet. “You didn't go because you weren't feeling well. Here take this,” she hands me a medicine cup, “take this and go lie down.” I take the medicine then go to Bria's room. I watch TV for a while then fall asleep. I wake up 2 hours later on my Nana's couch. What a crazy dream, I thought. But why do I have the taste of medicine in my mouth?

Submitted by Mariah C.
Fairfield High School