

Joey

As a sixteen year old boy, Joey never got what he wanted for Christmas or his birthday. He never wore the right clothes to school. He was often teased by the popular kids. Joey's parents passed away when he was young, so he lived with his poor aunt and uncle who had three other kids and they all shared a room.

On Joey's way to school walking through the fields he picked a dandy lion and made a wish, thinking nothing will happen.

The following morning Joey woke up and to his surprise his bed was no longer a bunk bed and his three other cousins were no longer in the room. He quickly ran downstairs and saw a maid cooking him breakfast. She told him that she ironed his clothes and they were in his room on his chair. He went back upstairs to put them on. He went through the day sad. Even though he could afford everything he wanted and more, he missed his family. He finally realized that money doesn't make happiness. As soon as he realized this, he was back home with the love of his family.
