

How would you feel if someone in your life never came back?

You would feel worry and sad, but you don't know where they could be at. This can happen to anyone. Everyone in this room could have a family member in the war. Here's a question to ask yourself: How does killing each other solve world issues? You would think how you can help to solve this. No one wants to get killed or be dead just for nothing, war can kill a lot of people no matter where you are, you going to be at war, so why don't we stop war and be safe and happy?
