

question

I just find it hard to trust "trust", instinct, and guts when it comes to making decisions on a two-way path.

How do people know which path to take or what choice to make if they themselves do not have the slightest idea of what's at the end of the road or even the outcome of the input?

Why can't we just have it all?

Submitted by Danica B.